Dearest Mom

Well, tomorrow is the big day. We plan to go over with one load and do some cleaning in the morning. Then we will probably have to make a dozen trips, but four girls have offered to help us, so it shouldn't be too bad. We will have dinner here, and Sunday night supper out, as usual. We are also going to sleep here tomorrow night, with breakfast on Monday morning; then on Monday night our first meal in "our new home." Harriet and I went to market this morning and bought staples, and came home just loaded down. I wish you could have seen us. We will get our "eatables" Monday night. I am going to do some packing tonight, but most of it tomorrow I guess. We are all so excited and thrilled. Have been buying pans & knives and will have to buy two straight chairs this week, but beyond that we are going to have to get along on quite a little until after Christmas.

The package came yesterday. Thanks just loads for sending the things. The blankets are just great. Don't need such heavy ones in an apartment as in a house. A girl here at the house has two towels she is going to lend me, so I guess I'm all set for the present.

Thanks also for your nice letter received yesterday. Surprising about Harry Murray. Did it say where he was stationed? And what about Alice's flowers? Do you think anything could be happening ~~at~~ now that B. W. is joining up? It might possibly, I suppose.

I don't seem to have much Christmas spirit this year and have bought very little. You do likewise, please. Remember that you gave me some gloves. I even thought we might dispense with a tree but perhaps I could rig up one on a table.

Fred & I had dinner Wednesday night, walked around the village and then went back to his room and chatted. He is fine, as usual.

Glad of, & wearing, his overcoat.
He is going over to Orange N.J. tomorrow to see the Jackson Lyons & son.

It happens that two tickets for the Symphony at Carnegie Hall <sup>tonight</sup> are going begging around here, so Harriet & I are going & I must therefore close now. The brownies were just great, the best you ever made. Thanks heaps.

Lovingly

Went to a Broadcast last night at the Columbia Broadcasting Studios. It was Kate Smith's program, 8 to 9. Fun.
